Labo has finished the third book and is now studying the fourth book. He is highly competitive and works hard to stay ahead. While he has improved in addition and subtraction, he faces challenges in division. When he gets answers wrong, it affects his mood. However, during some classes, he becomes very serious and studious, refraining from distractions.

Projects

Birds

Lobo found great joy in exploring the world of birds and understanding their significance in our daily lives. During bird-watching sessions, he observed species like drongos, cranes, bulbuls, and kingfishers while listening to their distinctive calls. Although he had some initial difficulty recognizing certain birds, he progressively learned to identify more of them after their names were introduced in class. Lobo displayed a need for improving his concentration span and answering questions. However, he was excited to learn about various aspects of birds, such as their prey, habitats, adaptations, and different types of birds, by watching a bird documentary. Lobo also actively participated in creating the group's bird-themed book and enjoyed assisting his peers in drawing and colouring bird diagrams.

Occupation

Lobo wants to become a carpenter when he grows up and make many wooden things like beds, chairs, tables, etc. In the class he had made a very good and beautiful picture of a carpenter with the help of his friends. He always asks a lot of questions about the carpenter and learnt many things about it. He also studied about the tools that a carpenter uses while making furniture.

Hindi

Lobo has made notable progress in reading and is a diligent student. He has finished writing the alphabets and has started taking dictations. His handwriting is neat and his mistakes are minimal. Lobo has also begun writing stories and, despite some sentence structure errors, strives to complete them. He consistently has his notebook checked. Lobo enjoys grammar and is not hesitant to seek clarification, particularly in "Varna Vichhed." Learning songs and poems may take time, but he diligently repeats lines after the teachers. Lobo is also learning Havan mantras, although he faces difficulty in pronouncing certain Sanskrit words.

English

Labo is a diligent and well-behaved student who regularly attends his English class. He demonstrates good classroom etiquette by sitting appropriately and attempting to speak in English. While he may not always complete sentences fully, he readily accepts the teacher's assistance, enabling him to articulate sentences with clarity.

During the Janmashtami celebration, Labo opted to participate in a Krishna-themed dance performance, which led him to forgo involvement in the English drama "Sudama and Krishna."

Labo has a penchant for reading English storybooks, particularly enjoying group reading sessions. He can proficiently read books at a 3rd-level standard. Among his favourites is "The Wizard of Oz," a book he frequently selects for free reading.

In addition to reading, Labo expresses a keen interest in writing stories in his notebook while referring to books. Notably, he possesses good handwriting skills. While participating in dictation exercises, he occasionally makes errors. To enhance his English reading comprehension, Labo may consider focusing more on reading and paying attention to details.

Labo's enthusiasm for English stories is palpable, as he actively engages with them. When posed with questions by the teacher regarding story details, Labo is able to provide coherent explanations of the narrative events.

Labo has a strong interest in dancing and enjoys dancing at any time. He is more passionate about dancing than singing. While he is interested in watching English movies, he needs to improve his language skills to better understand them. Labo also sings well, although his learning is progressing gradually. He is a pleasant and innocent boy who eagerly embraces different roles in plays, with the need for improvement in his pronunciation.
