“In the morning, I enjoyed the games we played. I was to perform juggling on annual Sports Day. The first time when I did juggling, I was not able to, but when I tried I learnt it. I chose juggling because when I saw Jayu didi, Malti didi and Pinki didi I thought – “seeing is not interesting, doing is interesting”, so I went to the juggling group. I was very scared to do on the plank initially, but when I used to climb on the plank every day and practice on it I was not scared at all after that. I did only the casket with Sumitra didi. I choose juggling as the corner. I choose that corner to learn something new. I overcame the mistakes by practicing every day whenever I had free time. I improved my juggling by learning different tricks. Yes, I liked what I did in the Sports Day! I also liked the folk dance that we did. In yogasan, though I like to do it, I felt pain when I was training to doing stretching but I kept trying. I liked my costume on the Sports Day.”

TRIP

Below is a write-up in her own words:

"We visited to Andaman for a trip. We stayed in Port Blair. I liked the food very much - every day, we used to eat fish. I thought that when we go back to Kechla, we should have food like this only. I learnt the life style of the people of Andaman. The place we visited were: Simachalam temple, Cellular Jail, Museum, Aquarium, Ross Island, North Bay Island, Chidia tapu, Radhanagar beach, different parks etc. I liked the Simachalam temple because it was very beautiful and clean. I disliked the Vishakapatnam beach because its smell was disgusting. In Cellular Jail, I saw the prison cells, oil mills, gallows etc. Here, the British used to treat the prisoners very badly and they used to force them to make oil out of coconut. Cellular Jail was also known as Kalapani because it was covered with water on all sides. I liked the 'light and sound show' there. When I was seeing and listening the show, I felt that some Indians used to beat other Indians. In North Bay Island we saw corals and fishes. I liked the Andaman trip very much and I think I would love to go again".
